

2018 CALL FOR PRESENTATIONS
Blaine House Conference on Service and Volunteerism
October 9, 2018
University of Maine, Orono, ME

Since 1986, the Blaine House Conference on Service and Volunteerism (BHCSV) has provided learning and networking opportunities for Maine's volunteer administrators, program managers, corporate employee volunteer coordinators, and service-learning educators. It is the only professional development conference tailored exclusively to the needs and challenges of Maine's volunteer sector.

The conference has a long tradition of mixing local peer presentations with sessions led by regional and national innovators. With the exception of the key note speaker, all the out-of-state session presenters donate their time and only accept reimbursement for travel and lodging.

Who attends?

Last year, 234 people attended the conference and 69% had less than 3 years' experience managing volunteers. Among the attendees, 58% worked in community-based volunteer programs and 42% were serving in AmeriCorps, developing the skills to be future managers of volunteers. 71% of all attendees had 8 hours or less volunteer management training in the prior year.

Conference Sessions. Organizers aim to meet the needs of volunteer managers and service-learning educators with wide ranging experience.

- Novice or intermediate level volunteer managers discover the complexity of issues that seem simple and seek to apply new learning to scenarios in ways they can immediately use.
- More advanced volunteer program staff want to learn about emerging issues, explore advanced topics, take current skills to new levels, and move towards being an expert in the field

Typical Session Attendance: 15 – 30 people

- Session time:
- single session is 75 min total – 50 min. active instruction; appropriate for overviews or introductions;
 - seminar session is 150 min total – 135 min. active instruction; best option for developing skills, knowledge

Presenters who propose to use case studies, scenarios, work groups, and peer information exchange to augment the inevitable moments of direct instruction have the greatest impact. Therefore, the selection committee will be reviewing proposal descriptions for evidence of multiple strategies.

Session proposals must be designed to help individuals increase specific competencies for managers of volunteers. To review the competencies and the progression through skill levels, use this url - <http://tinyurl.com/jsbctmq>

Conference sessions are flagged to help participants meet their goals.

- Need to Know should help novice and intermediate skill-level participants master basic knowledge, abilities, and skills.
- Learn to Use is intended to meet the needs of advanced and seasoned managers who want to apply skills/knowledge/abilities to increase personal OR program effectiveness.
- Innovative Solutions is reserved for creative, unique, even re-imagined approaches to community issues through volunteer-based service. Presenters need to help session participants understand the catalyst for the innovation, the process used to develop it, the lessons learned from piloting or implementing it, and benefits realized.
- Proven Approaches are volunteer programs or strategies that have proven to be highly effective in meeting community needs. The success of these approaches is backed up by evaluation or other evidence.
- Special Issues focus on either special populations or specialized settings/disciplines (e.g., parents of newborns, substance abuse prevention, economic development, revitalizing community). These sessions allow people to more closely examine volunteer options in specific environments.

Presenters receive positive evaluations when they

2. have an interactive, hands on elements;
3. incorporate the principles of adult learning and effective teaching for adults;
4. provide reference materials participants can read or consult after the session.
